

INTERPROFESSIONAL
DEANS LEADERSHIP
PROGRAM | IDLP

Leadership Development with a Dedicated Interprofessional Focus

November 29 – December 1, 2017

AAMC Learning Center, Washington, DC

IPEC IDLP Applicant Qualifications

Participants in the IPEC Interprofessional Leadership Development Program (IDLP) should be a dean or senior administrator in an academic setting with three or fewer years of experience. The participant must be from an IPEC member associations' school. Specifically, the applicant should have experience in the following areas:

- Directing and guiding the development of the school or program's academic programs, services and functions in accordance with the parent institution's goals, objectives, and resources, as well as student and community needs
- Maintaining accreditation of the school or program (primary accountability)
- Conferring regularly with the provost, senior management, program directors, and other parent institution personnel
- Assuring the development and administration of operating budgets and systems for the school or program
- Developing, implementing, and managing school or program faculty, staff, and infrastructure (primary responsibility)
- Leading, stimulating, and supporting development to establish partnerships throughout the parent institution and community for academic, service, and research programs